

PhD Confirmation Seminar: Shane Bawden

Alcohol supply and its harmful impacts to Aboriginal communities in a regional hub: Alice Springs, Northern Territory

Supervisors:

*Professor Marcia Langton, Indigenous Studies, Centre for Health Equity, Melbourne School of Population and Global Health;
Associate Professor Richard Chenhall, Health Humanities and Social Sciences, Centre for Health Equity, Melbourne School of Population and Global Health; and*

Dr Kristen Smith, Indigenous Studies, Centre for Health Equity, Melbourne School of Population and Global Health.

Chair: Professor Shaun Ewen, Melbourne Poche Centre for Indigenous Health

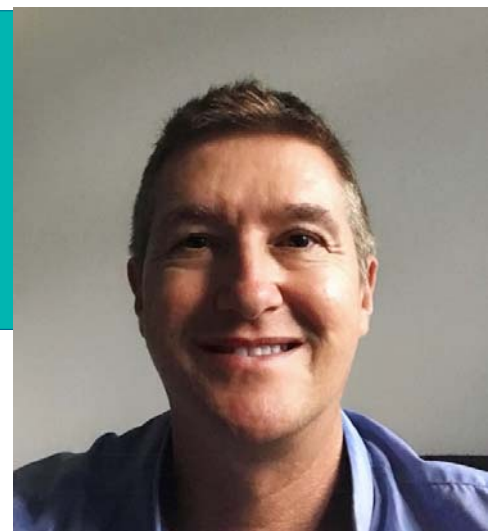

Monday, 07 May 2018

1:00pm

Level 4, Seminar Room 410,
207 Bouverie Street

Shane Bawden is a PhD Candidate in the Indigenous Studies Unit, Centre for Health Equity. He comes from a legal studies and social work background. He has a Bachelor of Legal Studies, Bachelor of Social Work and a Master of Social Work. Shane has experience working in the primary and secondary health sectors. He has been involved in social justice advocacy, policy development, research and worked collaboratively with Indigenous community organisations in the areas of health and policy.

The primary aim of this research is to provide contextual evidence related to the supply of alcohol to Indigenous communities in Alice Springs and the surrounding region. This research aims to address this gap in the knowledge and understanding of the interconnections between alcohol supply chains and the effectiveness of different alcohol controls and policies in Indigenous contexts. The research will contribute to understandings imbalances driven by the laws and regulations relating to the production, retail and consumption of alcohol.